1.  Chinese Communist shipbuilding in Shanghai was concentrated on the construction of coastal vessels of 1000-2000 tons. There were no indications of any larger vessels under construction. 25X1

2. The Chinese Communists were taking increased security measures to prevent ship crews from observing activities in Shanghai. 25X1
- The Chinese, with the exception of the youth, were still independent in nature and seemed strongly resentful of the current rigid controls; however, little chance for effective resistance to the regime was apparent.
